

Environmental

Salmon require high quality, oxygen rich, cool water in which to thrive.

However, even in the best possible locations, there can be circumstances where environmental factors and water quality change. For example, heavy rainfall can cause significant “run off” from surrounding land, bringing dissolved nutrients or suspended particles.

Similarly, algal blooms can impact oxygen levels in the water.