

Predators

Salmon farmers have a responsibility to protect their fish against predators and use a range of technologies and management measures to deter them. For example, nets over the top of the pens protect against birds and acoustic technology produces noise to deter seals.

However, protecting against predators is difficult, and despite the management measures available, some predator attacks can and do happen.

Predators of salmon include seals and various species of bird and salmon farms are attractive places for them to attack.